By Louise Bali If you prefer a calendar tailored to suit your personality, you can make one yourself using Microsoft Ophis templates. These templates allow you to create unique sticker calendars that you can print for each month of the year. You can add custom photos and messages, and even write your dates to your calendar if you want. Open Microsoft Word and click the Office menu icon (located in the upper left corner — looks like four colored boxes). Click New to create a new document. Scroll down the list of templates and select calendars. Try to find a longer calendar The standard Word document is 8.5 by 11 inches. If no calendar is available, select calendar 8.5 in 11 that has a vertical direction (the longest vertical aspect). Choose a template with an image at the top and calendar data at the bottom. Delete the image in the template and replace it with your photo or design. The TIF file is better for printing pictures but JPEG will also work. Write a message or caption in the custom text box, if the template provides one. Click within each date box to write information about special dates (optional). Right-click the boxes that make up the calendar (if there are any) and select the automatic shape format. Change the color of the box to your liking. Repeat the steps of four to six for all months of the year. Save the file. Go to Print in the main list of Word and select properties next to the printer you choose. Adjust the size of the document if it is greater than 8.5 by 11 inches (standard) and then change the print quality to Best or the similar option. Select labeled paper or polished stock paper in the form of paper. Set the document for full-color printing. Load the glossy cardboard stock paper (glossy on one side, matte on the other side) into the printer. Click OK in the printer dialog box to print the poster calendar file (one month at a time or the value of the entire year of the stickers). Related products as we all know of fast food and SUV commercial menus, the bigger is always the best. But the typical image print is only 5 by 7 or 8 by 10 inches. Isn't there a way to print your bigger pictures? There's definitely. You can make prints not only bigger, but actually gigantic - as my kids might say. How does 20 in 30 inches hit you? How about bigger, like 3 or 4 feet on the side? No problem. We talked about printing pictures in general, in November 2002 and in April 2004, for example. This week let's discuss some poster printing techniques that will let your photos dominate the room. Before you start creating stickers, consider how many pixels your photo needs to make a good print. You probably already know the basic rule about having 200 or 300 pixels per inch of printing, this is a good starting point. But keep in mind that you will look at the stickers from further than you usually see a 5 in 7 image. This means that you can slacken the pixels and get great results. In fact, you can take a 6-megapixel image (usually 2400 by 3000 pixels) and get amazing results when printed at a rate of 20 by 30 inches. That's about 100 pixels per inch. For fantastic fine-framing quality stickers, don't look any further than online printing sites like my two favorite shutterfly and Sappfish. Most online printing sites offer a standard range of printing sizes, as well as stickers like 16 by 20 and 20 by 30 inches. I have made many stickers size prints this way, and the quality is very good. The prints are delivered in a poster tube and come on a heavy photo stock that mounts well in the frame. Another popular A large picture is created from a set of smaller tiles. In other words, you can split your image into a grid pattern, and each piece of grid is printed on plain paper 8-in-10 or 8.5-11 inches. The advantage of this process is twofold. You can not only do this on your home printer, without sending your photo to the printing service, but you can make your photos pretty much any size. It all depends on how big or small you make your network lines. There are many free websites and utilities that can help you cut your photos to print a poster. Check blocking stickers, for example. Just download any JPEG file (the maximum file size is 1MB) and select the wide and high number of pages you want to have the finished product. Each poster page appears in a downloadable PDF document. After printing the label plates, you'll need to trim the white edges and assemble the finished product. Post, get famous! Every week, we choose our favorite reader's image based on creativity, originality and technology. Every month, the best weekly winners receive an estimated prize of between $15 and $50. Here is how to enter: send us your photo in JPEG format, with a resolution of no more than 640 pixels at 480 pixels. Entries in higher resolutions will be ruled out immediately. If necessary, use the photo editing software to reduce the file size of the image before emailing us. Include the title of your photo with a short description and how to photograph it. Don't forget to send your name, email address and postal address. Before entering, please read the full description of the rules and regulations of the competition. This Week Hot Peak: I Dare You, by Ian Hendry, Memphis, Tennessean writes: We were swimming in a local lake when I saw that all the kids were jumping from the top floor of the dock. I convinced my wife at it (it was always something of a reckless) and then I took this picture from the bottom because it went over me in the water. Ian uses the Nikon D100 at a fast speed 1/2500 second shutter to capture this scene. Watch all the hot photos of the week online. Have a question about the digital image?
